Moore Republican Women receives three major national awards from NFRW

December 6, 2021 – Moore Republican Women (MRW) was recently honored with three prestigious national awards from the National Federation of Republican Women (NFRW), the largest grassroots Republican women’s association in the country, at the NFRW’s October 2021 convention in Florida. To achieve the top honor for these awards, MRW competed with NFRW clubs from every state in the United States.

The awards included:

Caring for America Award

We won this for our leadership in fighting Critical Race Theory in our schools. Our multi-pronged approach enlisted the help of club members and NCFRW clubs to educate parents across North Carolina, informed local school boards and requested help from legislators helped stop this malignant threat. MRW became the leading voice in the North Carolina Federation of Republican Women opposing CRT and the federal government’s plan to mandate CRT in federal funding. CRT in schools has since become a major political issue, as evidenced in the recent Virginia race for Governor. MRW was on the leading edge of this controversy.

Armed Services Award

For more than eight years, MRW’s priority has been to help the military in our community, opening our hearts and taking action whenever there is a need.

At every monthly meeting, the Club collects donations to help a military-connected organization with its work, and it actively seeks ways throughout the year to honor our military, veterans and their families.

Through financial and in-kind donations, as well as volunteer assistance, MRW actively supports the programs of Military Missions in Action, an award-winning North Carolina charity that serves members of the Armed Forces and their families, deployed troops, veterans with disabilities and homeless veterans. We take donated food baskets and clothing directly to homeless vets in our area, send goody packages to deployed troops, participate strongly in the “Wreaths Across America” program, support local veterans parades and activities, donate furniture and household items to help the military and their families, and more.

Diamond Achievement Award

For the 5th biennial convention in a row, MRW has received this award, which is given to clubs that meet the highest exacting standards for Club Functions, Membership Development, Programs, Leadership Development, Campaign Activities and Community Relations.

Pauline Bruno, President of MRW at the time these awards were presented, said, “At MRW, we care for our neighbors, our children, our county and our country. These awards from NFRW are truly an honor, and we appreciate the recognition for what we do through our members. But what really matters is knowing we are making a difference to individuals and communities, based on conservative Republican principles of freedom, dignity and responsibility. Our members are generous, dedicated and knowledgeable people who are willing to reach out and help others, as well as stand up against the woke culture that threatens our freedoms. That’s what we’re all about.”
